

The Company

The company started as a family production company in 1840 when Fortunato Gargantini decided to buy the first mechanical loom, kept secretly in his home basement, in order to produce the most sophisticated linen fabrics using noble yarn from nearby Ireland.

Subsequent generations of Gargantini family took charge of the important “know-how” left for him by the founder and expanded the production and commercial aspect by distributing the collections of flax, and other equally noble fibers such as cotton and silk, with great success throughout Italy, Europe and eventually the United States.
